Poor Ump Couldn't See

Poor I'mp Couldn't See

Those three strikeouts got on the nerves of the Blighters. In plata and fancy language, they told the map that, even if he was a Loot, he couldn't see for a darn. "I know I cant", he replied, between removals of his moutipiece, "Whonell can with these cussed things on?" Which left the Blighters' sluggers without a comeback.

They took the field, One of the Blanks actually connected with a ball (no, the ball din't have a mask on, neither did the bat) and knocked it outward in the general direction of Germany. Far out in the field, a Blighter pasturer lifted up his paws as if signalling "Assemble conter, double time!"

But the ball didn't assemble. It just scattered and retreated, And the Blanks had a run.

Before they got done, though, the Blighters claim that one of their men, even though smothered in the chlorine-fooler, actually caught a fly. The Blanks hotly deny it. But as everybody on the field, even in the bleachers—had masks on, there are no reliable witnesses. No-body happened to have wiped his eyepieces in time to see that miraculous catch.

Connell of War Held

Council of War Held

At the conclusion of the first round the managers and captains held a council of war. They had intended to play the whole game out with the facial smotherers encircling every contestant's map. The strain, though, was getting something fierce.

"Aw, hell," elegantly began the Blanks' manager, "let's leave th' dam things off and play a real ball game."

"Damhoopin'!" agreed the no less erudite Highters' propeller. "One inning of that smother-onion baseball 'znough for our side."

So they went at it, masks off and the sky the limit. While that state of affairs might imaginably have favored the Blighters, they went at the sky the wrong way. But they didn't go there till the tenth inning when, with Hank removed to his old place behind the plate and with a real barbed wire mask instead of a leather-rubber-charcoal-canvas affair over his plain-but-manly, the Blanks came through with the bingle that gave them the game, 5 to 4.

(By Came to THE STARS AND STRIPES.)

NEW YORK, May 30.—Some real battles were staged in the big boxing show for the benefit of the Red Cross held at Madison Square Garden last Saturday night. In the main event, Battling Levinsky defeated Jim Coffey on points.

Levinsky started the great charitable stunt by landing a let' on Coffey's nose and a right deep into the middle section of his anatomy. He also landed rights and lefts on Coffey's dentistry.

In the third round Coffey ripped in for keeps, and in this session, and also in the fourth, there was some delightful mixing by both parties.

A left to the body and a right to the faw almost downed Levinsky in the fifth, but he evened up the round by landing two mighty lefts and rights to the body. The sixth round was a sizzling session, both men fighting like bulls.

had laid out, in a very short time, a fine athletic track. Here the various companies of the battalion carried on their field and track events with all the zeal and keen competition that one might, expect to find at an inter-collegiate meet at Franklin Field.

The meet was under the direct charge of the battalion athletic officer- a certain licutenant who has held the bantam and featherweight, championship of the Army for four years, and during that time met the best men of his weight outside as well as in the Army. Some of the athletes who took part in the events have a wide reputation. One of these was First Sergeant Charlie J. Rice, the old University of Maine flyer, who won the 100 and 200 yard dashes. Rice is the runner who was selected to represent the United States at the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden. He was pushed to the limit to win both events.
